BUBONIC BILLS

Expenses of the Plague Epidemic.

Hart & Company's Wholesale Lunches at Retail Rates.—Other Accounts.

The leading item of interest in today's instalment of the plague bills is Hart & Co.'s account for $1,460.40, for "lunches," "extra coffee," cigars, etc. The signature of G. R. Carter appears at the foot of the bill, in the blank for the "Government officer directly incurring the expense." The majority of the bills, so far, have been signed in this manner, the subscriber rarely, if ever, having anything to do with the expense incurred other than to approve of it or to place his signature in the blank above described as an O. K. According to the itemized account of the Hart & Co. bill, those who did incur the expenses noted are as follows: W. C. Weedon, J. S. B. Pratt, Ed. Towse (one of the directors of Hart & Co.), A. W. Carter, G. R. King, C. Charlock, Dr. A. E. Nichols, Armstrong Smith, J. D. McVeigh, M. Rosa, Mr. Campbell, J. Thompson, Dr. Howard and the Marshal's office. The lunches, cigars, cigarettes, etc., were in most cases for guards and office employees of the Board of Health. The tenth lot of bubonic bills is as follows:

At the Orpheum.

The return to a regular old-time minstrel show proved more than satisfactory to the large audience last evening. Every number in the "Grand First Part" was an unqualified success. Murray earned an encore with his ragtime song and Master Livers captured the house with "I'm the Warmest Member in the Land." Chenault sang as well as ever, and Jackson Hearde made a decided hit out of the possibilities of a colored president. Miss Moss, by request, repeated "Old Kentucky Home," singing it with much sweetness and feeling. Hogan sang an old song that was a new song, as Hoganized by Ernest, "I'm Living Easy, on Pork Chops Greasy," and he looked it. An encore brought a second verse, another brought a third, and a yet stronger ovation produced one of Hogan's celebrated get-offs—nothing much if you see it in print—but, as heard, according to Hogan, a rib tickler. Saulsbury sang a pretty ballad in splendid style. Indubitably the best number on the program was Hogan's stump speech; it is irresistibly funny. The quartette secured a merited encore. Murray and Abpel, the lady in a dainty paper dress of her own manufacture, executed a neat song and dance, while Hearde and Chenault also put on a sketch. Miss Moss sang some new ballads and the program concluded with the "Blackville Duel," in which Hogan plays a sort of colored edition of Joe Jefferson's "Bob Acres" with great effect and amid much laughter. The seats for "Uncle Tom's Cabin" for Thursday, Friday and Saturday, are in great demand already.
